AMERICAN PORK.

Germany Removes the Embargo on This Product.

SECRETARY RUSK SATISFIED.

The One Object of the Secretary of Agriculture Accomplished—The Farmers' Alliance and the Present Political Situation—Other News from Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A representative of the United Press called upon Secretary Rusk yesterday and showed him a cablegram that he had just received from Berlin as follows:

"The German government has raised the embargo on American pork. The official declaration will be delayed."

The secretary stated that no official notification had been received by him in confirmation of this statement, but he added that if such action had not already been determined upon he had very little doubt it would soon be.

"The removal of this embargo," said the secretary, "on American pork products in Germany was one of the first things which I determined to accomplish, if possible, on assuming my present office. Immediately on the passage of the animals bill on Aug. 30, 1890, I took steps through the department of state to present to the German government in the strongest manner the propriety, in view of the provision made in that law for the inspection of American salt pork meats, to grant our exporters relief from the prohibition actually existing on all American pork. The result of the negotiations showed me that to obtain adequate concessions from the German government, it would be necessary for us to provide for a microscopical examination of all pork destined for their trade.

"I am quite convinced of the disposition of the German government to deal fairly with us in this matter, and to take into account the desirability for the people of both countries to maintain the friendliest trade relations, and it is in this conviction that I declare my belief that though we have not yet received any official notification in conformity with the words of the cablegram submitted to me, that we can look for some such action on the part of the German government ere long.

"Efforts were constantly made to secure necessary legislation, resulting in the passage of the act of March 3, 1891, upon which the recent regulations issued by this department are based, and on March 5 I caused the provisions of the law to be communicated to the German government, through the department of state and our minister in Berlin, accompanied by the declaration that this department was prepared to carry them out in such a manner as to afford to the government of Germany the most thorough and satisfactory guarantee of the immunity of all exports of American pork to that country from trichinae and any disease affecting the wholesomeness of the meat."

Attitude of the Farmers' Alliance.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Senator Edmunds is out in an interview on the general political situation and the probable outcome of the continuance of the Farmers' Alliance movement and agitation of the silver question. The attitude of the two great parties in respect to each other and public affairs, he thinks, is unchanged, the Republicans continue to favor protection to American labor and industry, while the Democrats, under the name of "Tariff Reform," appear to be in favor of encouraging the consumption of foreign made articles. What the effect of the Farmers' Alliance movement will be upon the next national election no one, he thinks, can foresee with precision.

When asked if he thought the silver question would be an issue in the next presidential election, he said: "I don't think it will be an issue between the Republican and Democratic parties, for I think that the Democratic party will hardly wish to make the silver question an issue to the extent of running any considerable risk of separating silver and gold as the coin money of the country, and certainly the great body of the Republican party are sure it will not. Up to the point of safety I have no doubt the Republican party will be in favor of using silver as money as it always has been. As the Farmers' Alliance platform, if it should nominate a candidate for president, will be on that topic I am quite unable to say."

New Design for Coins.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Mr. Edward O. Leech, director of the mint, will probably issue a circular tomorrow to artists for new designs for subsidiary coins. The general features of the present coins will be preserved to a considerable extent. The coins to be changed are the silver dollar, the half dollar, the quarter dollar and the dime. These changes are to be made under the act passed at the last session of congress, which appropriated [illegible] for the purpose and is available July 1. Director Leech thinks that [illegible] treasury can be recoined with this appropriation. The gold coins are considered satisfactory and will not be changed. [illegible] After that date the treasury will [illegible] silver dollars. The designs [illegible] will not be changed for twenty-five years. The circular will call for the submission of the new designs by June 1.

Land Entries Refused.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Secretary Noble yesterday rendered a decision refusing applications to purchase forty-[illegible] entries [illegible] members of the Kaweah co-operative colony in California now within the Sequoia National park reservation. These cases have been in contention before the department since [illegible]. The secretary [illegible] holds that the applications to purchase under the timber and stone act are not entries of land and the parties making them acquired no vested right, and it was competent for congress to reserve this land, which it did by act creating the reservation.

The secretary also holds that a valid homestead entry excepts the land from the reservation, but in case the entrymen fail to perfect their entries should be cancelled. The settlers on this land have already expended [illegible] in various improvements which they must seek through congress.

Reciprocity With Canada.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Sir Charles Tupper, Sir John S. D. Thompson, Canadian minister of justice, and Hon. G. E. Foster, minister of finance, who arrived here at a late hour last night from New York, accompanied by Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister, will have an interview with Secretary Blaine to-day, and lay before him the proposals of the Canadian government, heretofore published, for reciprocal trade relations. The conferences will be secret, and are preliminary to the appointment of commissioners by both the United States and Great Britain to formally negotiate.

Special Weather Bulletin.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The signal office furnishes the following special bulletin to the press: The weather reports from Florida and southern Georgia indicate the occurrence there of the coldest weather on record for this season of the year. The minimum temperatures at Savannah and Jacksonville were 30 degrees and 31 degrees respectively, which were 3 degrees below the lowest previously recorded during the first decade of April. Light frosts occurred at Savannah and Pensacola and killing frosts at Mobile and Jacksonville, which at the last named station is about two weeks later than any of which record has been made. It is probable that through out the south Atlantic and east gulf states considerable damage resulted to early fruits and vegetables from the frosts of the Sunday and Monday mornings.

Pension Office Work.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The pension office during the week ending March 28 issued 6,[illegible] pension certificates of all classes, the average first payment on each being $118.51. Under the provisions of general pension laws [illegible] were granted, and under the dependent pension law 4,057.

Must Know Where They Come From.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Assistant Secretary Spaulding has decided that teas imported from China and Japan must be marked with the name of the country in which the tea is grown, and not the intermediate country of shipment.

DUEL IN THE STREET.

Miner Killed by a Saloon Keeper at Middlesboro, Ky.

MIDDLESBORO, Ky., April 7.—One of the most desperate conflicts between man and man that has ever taken place in this vicinity, and which has added another dark stain to the pages of the criminal history of southeastern Kentucky, occurred Sunday at a saloon, two miles west of this city, on Bennet's Fork of Yellow creek. The participants in the tragedy were Adam Legere, a saloon keeper, and Linsey Leach, a miner.

Legere and Leach met in the above saloon and fell out over a woman, whom, it is said, was living with Leach as his wife. Hot words, superinduced by bad whisky, followed. They then left the house, and when upon the outside turned face to face, and without a word both drew their guns, Legere with a 38 Smith and Wesson and a 45 Colts, and Leach with a 38 Smith and Wesson. Both men were game. They eyed each other for an instant and then the deadly work began. A fusillade of shots followed.

When the smoke cleared away Leach was seen to stagger a short distance and fall dead, with a bullet through his abdomen. Legere was untouched, and immediately after the shooting fled. He was met going up the mountain side by a gentleman to whom he exhibited his coat. He was riddled with bullets. Legere then disappeared in the mountain fastnesses.

Italy's Demands.

TORONTO, April 7.—Signor Prado Valmini, an Italian of distinction and an official of his government, was interviewed on the New Orleans affair as he was passing through this city on his way to Japan yesterday. Valmini declares that the Italian government would insist upon the stand already taken and that no settlement would be arrived at until the families of the murdered men had been compensated and the leaders of the mob arrested and placed on trial. He further declared that the men who led the mob would be arrested before another week or the flag of Italy would float over the city of New Orleans within a month.

EUROPEAN WHEAT.

The Condition of the Present Crop.

IT IS CONSIDERED A FAILURE.

English Farmers Expect the Price of Wheat to Reach the Highest Figure That It Has for Years—Various Other News from Foreign Ports.

LONDON, April 7.—The Standard publishes a long and careful review of the agricultural outlook, in the course of which it says that the steady rise in wheat revives the hopes of the English farmer, adding that wheat will probably reach the highest price in many years, the principal cause of the rise being the failure of foreign crops.

The wheat crops of France and Russia, according to The Standard, are much below the average, and, the same paper says, the deficiency will be at least 10,000,000 quarters, adding: "It is expected that cold winds and frosts have almost destroyed the French crops. Germany, Holland and Belgium all furnish pessimist reports. In Roumania there is a decreased wheat area, and in India there has been a bad wheat season.

"The only exception is Hungary, where there are better prospects, but it is almost certain that the world's wheat consumption will exceed the production computed. Whatever the magnitude of America's crop may be it will not be sufficient to cover the European deficit, thus compelling an extensive draft upon the reserves for the third year in succession."

The Standard, in conclusion, says: "The increased home consumption, the decreased wheat area, owing to the spread of population and recourse to scientific tillage in order to repair the waste of first settlers, thus increasing the cost of production must inevitably remove the American farmers' formidable competition in European markets, and allow the English farmer to look forward to a prosperous future."

War Clouds in India.

CALCUTTA, April 7.—If present indications turn out to be correct there is very serious trouble brewing in India for the British forces. Emboldened by the success of the Manipuris, who recently crushed the Ghoorka escort accompanying Chief Commissioner James W. Quinton in his efforts to settle the disputes which have occurred among the rival chieftains of Assam, the Miranzai, in the Cohat territory, a district of the Peshawer division of the Punjab, have arisen in arms and are attacking the British troops along the whole length of their lines. It is also known that the Miranzai attack is being pushed so vigorously that strong reinforcements have been hurriedly dispatched to the front.

"The Thunderer" on Uncle Sam's Navy.

LONDON, April 7.—The Philadelphia correspondent of The Times gives a long account of the American navy. The Times devotes a critical editorial to the subject, dwelling mainly upon the likelihood that when the American ironclads are carrying a full coal supply their speed will be largely reduced. The Times concludes: If the greatest boldness of the American designers is really based upon sound judgment, we need not regret it. We shall equally profit in the long run by their experience, whether it results in failure or success. We may, therefore, watch with keen sympathy associated friendly workers on the same problem.

The Ministry Cools Down.

LONDON, April 7.—"The Times'" Rome correspondent says: The arrival of the text of Baron Fava's first note showed that the misunderstanding was due to Mr. Blaine's interpreting the demand for trial as a demand for a conviction. The ministry is indisposed to push the matter beyond a demand for recognition of the principle of international justice. The excitement has entirely subsided.

An Italian Echo.

PARIS, April 7.—A prominent Italian said that the Republicans in Italy, who form a powerful minority, entertain a friendly feeling for America and would consider a war with the United States simply an attempt to discredit republican institutions in the eyes of the Italian people.

All Quiet at Rome.

LONDON, April 7.—The Rome correspondent of The Daily News says that owing to the moderation of Italy's demands, the New Orleans dispute has entered a quiet phase, and that all danger of complications will be avoided.

It, have been assured that the concessions which they asked for will be granted in most instances. The painters contended for eight hours work and $3.50 a day as their remuneration. It is estimated that there were 1,500 painters who left their business idle to contend for a reduction of hours and an increase in wages.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH CANADA

Postponed Until the President Returns from His Western Trip.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The preliminary negotiations between Secretary Blaine and the representatives of the Canadian government, who arrived in Washington Sunday, towards the settlement of the reciprocity matter and other questions of mutual interest to the United States and Canada, have been suspended for the present.

The suspension, however, is not the result of any serious differences of opinion between the respective negotiators but is the result of the desire of President Harrison to be in Washington while the negotiations are on. As the president will leave on his southern and western trip on the 14th inst., he would have been out of the city most, if not the whole, of the time the conferences were being held, had the original intention of the negotiators been carried out.

Shortly before noon Monday Sir Charles Tupper, high commissioner for Canada in London; Sir John S. D. Thompson, the Canadian minister of justice, and Hon. G. E. Foster, the Canadian minister of finance, who are to represent the Canadian government in the negotiations, left their hotel for the residence of Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister, thence proceeding in company with Sir Julian to the residence of Secretary Blaine. After the usual cortesies had been exchanged, Mr. Blaine told the commissioners that on account of the disposition of the president in the matter he would be obliged to asked for a suspension of the negotiations for the present.

Sir Charles Tupper, in an interview with a United Press reporter Monday afternoon, said that when he visited Mr. Blaine at the state department on Thursday last, he made arrangements for the meeting Monday. "I returned immediately to Canada," said Sir Charles, "informed my colleagues of the arrangements made, and we left Ottawa for Washington at once, arriving here last night. When we called on Mr. Blaine this morning he explained to us that as the president desired to be in Washington while the negotiations were going on and as he was about to leave Washington on his extended trip in a short time, it was desirable that the negotiations should be postponed for the present. We were pleased to agree to the request, and we will leave Washington to-day, returning when the president is in a position to allow us to proceed."

It seems that Mr. Blaine after making the engagement with Sir Charles, informed the president of what he had done and learned for the first time that the president wanted the negotiations suspended while he was away from Washington. Sir Julian Pauncefote was notified of the desired change in the program, and he telegraphed Sir Charles Tupper at Ottawa not to come to Washington. The dispatch was not received, however, before the commissioners left Ottawa.

The commissioners and Mr. Chipman, Sir Charles' secretary, had luncheon with Sir Julian Pauncefote Monday afternoon and later they left for New York, whence Sir Charles will sail for England and the others proceeding to Ottawa.

Points to Be Discussed.

The following are the propositions to be discussed at the conference:

First—The renewal of the reciprocity treaty of 1854 with such modifications as will suit the altered circumstances of both countries.

Second—The reconsideration of the treaty of 1888 with respect to the Atlantic fisheries with the aim of securing free admission into the United States markets of Canadian fishery products in return for facilities to be granted the United States fishermen to buy bait and supplies and to tranship cargoes in Canada, all such privileges to be mutual.

Third—Protection of mackerel and other fisheries of the Atlantic ocean and inland waters also.

Fourth—The relaxation of the seaboard inland coasting laws of the two countries.

Fifth—Mutual salvage and saving of wrecked vessels.

Sixth—An arrangement for settling the boundary between Canada and this country.

ASSASSINATION AND ROBBERY.

A Dead Body Found Under Mysterious Circumstances Near Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, April 7.—What is believed to have been an assassination and robbery occurred at West Liberty, a hamlet two miles south of Pittsburg, at a late hour Sunday night. Yesterday morning the body of John W. Consawlis was found on the road leading from West Liberty to Pittsburg. There was a pistol wound in his head and his pockets had been rifled of their contents. In the hand of the victim was found a revolver with three empty chambers. There is no clew to the cause of his death, but police officials are satisfied that Consawlis was murdered and then robbed.

The victim had spent Sunday evening with Miss Maggie Smith, to whom he was engaged to be married, and had left West Liberty at 11 o'clock intending to go to the home of his mother in Allegheny City. Before leaving his sweetheart he had shown her a [illegible] and a silver watch and $1,200 in cash which he told her was to be used to set them up at housekeeping when they should be married on the 16th of this month. He had also exhibited the revolver which was found clutched in his hand yesterday morning.

Of his valuables none were found except the silver watch. The [illegible] was almost buried in the mud, having been trampled upon. There were evidences of a desperate struggle. Mr. Consawlis was about 35 years of age.

OHIO LEGISLATURE.

Proceedings of Both Branches of the General Assembly.

IMPORTANT COMMITTEE REPORTS

Management of the Penitentiary Thoroughly Investigated by a Joint Committee of the Legislature—Bills Introduced in the House—The Senate Accomplishes Nothing—Other Ohio State News.

COLUMBUS, O., April 7.—The joint legislative committee investigating the management of the Ohio penitentiary has completed its report. It criticises the board of managers for unbusinesslike transactions, and dwells considerably on the system of procuring pardons. Secretary Dr. McClain, of the board of managers, is held directly responsible for the circulation of stories concerning the warden and matron which the committee finds unsupported by a shadow of evidence, and it is claimed he will be asked to resign.

Mr. Price introduced in the house a bill changing the amount of time to be deducted from the sentence of convicts in the penitentiary for good behavior. It amends the law so that longer term prisoners may gain and short-term lose a small per cent. A one-year inmate receives five days off from each of the twelve months of his sentence; a two-year man gets seven days; three years, nine days; four years, ten days; five years, eleven days; six years, twelve days.

The senate received a number of appointments from the governor and adjourned without passing or introducing a bill.

GORMAN'S RECIPE.

All the South Needs is Capital and to Be Let Alone.

BALTIMORE, April 7.—Senator Gorman returned from his southern trip with his health wonderfully improved. He declared that what he had seen in the south convinced him that its future development is beyond calculation. Upon being asked as to the political bearing of his trip, Senator Gorman promptly denied that it had any.

"Some dispatches quoted you as having made some comments on the sentiment expressed in the south on Cleveland or Hill."

"Then," answered Mr. Gorman, "such stories were made out of whole cloth. There was not a word of truth in them. I most carefully abstained from any and all political allusions. I do not think that I can make a more emphatic denial than that."

Returning to the subject of southern progress, Mr. Gorman said, "What I was not prepared to find, perhaps, struck me with especial force. It was that people who belong down south—the natives—are manifesting an activity in the development of their section of the country that has been lost sight of by many in the north. Northern capital is doing a great deal, to be sure, but it is not doing everything. Southern brains and southern money are playing an equal, indeed, I can safely say a greater part, in the industrial progress."

The senator then discussed in detail the various evidences of progress he had seen in every town and hamlet. He concluded by saying: "What the south needs is simply capital, and to be let alone."

TELEPHONE SERVICE DESTROYED.

An Electric Wire Does a Vast Amount of Damage at Albany, N. Y.

ALBANY, April 7.—For the fourth time in the history of two months the telephone service in this city is entirely destroyed—this time by fire. At 12:57 o'clock yesterday afternoon Lineman C. F. Haack, of the telephone company, noticed a streak of fire come in on the wire leading from the Abbey. He immediately cut the wire, but it was on fire outside, and before he could reach it the whole cupola was ablaze. The fire alarm wires have been in trouble, and the turning in of an alarm was delayed in consequence. By the time the department arrived the whole neighborhood was alive with crossed wires falling on the trolley wire and sending out streams of fire.

The police kept the crowd back, but the firemen could not work until the railway company shut off their current. By hard work the fire was confined to the operating rooms and cupola on the fifth and sixth floors. The entire service of the company is a wreck, and it will be weeks before any communication will be established. The loss to the company is about $25,000. Several tenants in stores beneath lose altogether $10,000 by water. Fourteen wires are destroyed, and Manager Cline says that unless something is done to protect their wires from the trolleys they may conclude not to fix them up again.

WELL, who told you so?

MAYOR DUDLEY is quite a runner.

Old Scratch was evidently a pretty busy individual.

SPEAKING of the weather, April snow in this section is not unheard of, but it's blamed unseasonable.

THERE may be some signs in the air for Governor Campbell. The Republicans captured his home city in Monday's contest.

FOR only one quarter of the year, 1891 is making quite a record in Marion for suicides and murder. Let us hope the record will not be extended.

THERE won't be any deadlocks anyhow. But we are puzzled to see what the council will permit Mayor Dudley to do naming the police force.

AT Richwood the Republicans knocked out the Alliance efforts and a "wet" council was selected. Prohibition is now growing healthy in Union county.

It is hoped the members of the new council are all full of progressive ideas. There is much anxiety to see the city of Marion don a few city airs since we have the name.

CINCINNATI went solidly republican, with varied majorities. This seems to settle the gang for the present. The better element of the Queen City must have a quiet sympathy for Governor Campbell.

SENATOR BRICE dropped into Lima and voted, doing so without opposition, though he has no residence there and wanted to avoid taxes. The Senator is making a strong bluff lately about being an Ohio resident.

AFTER all it begins to look as though the support and opposition to Mr. Parnell is almost wholly due to religious prejudices. When this is considered it may be well understood that the Irish leader is making a strong fight.

THAT Mayor Dudley should be reelected in the face of so determined a democratic majority for the balance of the ticket, and in spite of the storm of republican scratches, shows him to have a stronger pull than his most devoted admirers accredited him.

IF the Mansfield News is not happy we miss our guess. The news made a hot fight against the gamblers and the democratic nominees that they supported, and the returns show the gang to be laid out cold. The News made a good fight and triumphed with law and order.

THE school board ticket was the only one that escaped the sharpened lead pencils. Well, we are glad the public schools are not a subject for partisan scheming. There was a movement that way two years ago and it was so effectually sat down upon that it ought not be attempted again.

A solid democratic council! Of course Isshelb is a possible exception but he ran on the democratic ticket and there he is classed. There ought to be the utmost harmony so far as partisan matters are concerned. But, mind you, the people will tire of it. Even Bucyrus and Galion were made to realize the error of such one-sidedness.

THERE is no intentional slight in omitting the Prohibition vote from our reports of Monday's election. The Prohibitionists cast a light vote and a badly scratched one. It seems that many of the third party voters wanted a hand in the contest between the leaders and they used their pencils. The exact Prohibition figures were not accessible today.

THE monthly crop report for Ohio shows an estimate of more than two and one half million acres of wheat which promises 97 per cent. of the full average crops. The season is a way late for oats, but there will be a pretty good acreage sown yet if the rain will cease soon enough and long enough to permit it. The prospects for the year are fairly encouraging.

An Assaulted Policeman Uses His Gun.

CHICAGO, April 7. — Officer John Ulrich, of the Desplaines Street police station, shot Edward Mahoney dead and wounded John Vanahan in the right leg at about 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The men were trying to break in the door of a saloon at 173 West Lake street, where they claimed they had been [illegible], and when the policeman advised them to go home and get a warrant Monday for the bartender's arrest, the two turned on him and began beating him unmercifully. Policeman Ulrich then drew his revolver and fired at close range, with the above result.

Quiet Reigns in the Coke Regions.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 7. — The dispatches received by the governor from the coke regions indicate that everything is quiet and that no further trouble is apprehended. The troops will probably be recalled in a couple of days.

WONDERFUL TROUSERS.

They Not Only Did Not Bag, but Made a Crack Gymnast of the Wearer.

I am somewhat of an athlete, and am in the habit of performing various exercises when I have nothing else to do, and yet hold a position where it is important that I should present a gentlemanly appearance.

The problem of how to prevent trousers from bagging has for a long time recurred to my mind and pressed for solution. I have tried the various devices advertised for cure or for prevention. I have consulted my fashionable friends, and even the tailors, fondly hoping they could be induced to give themselves away.

Some of my friends have solved the problem by hanging up in their wardrobes 1,095 pairs of trousers, which maneuver enables them to put on a fresh pair morning, noon and night.

Now, my friends and employers estimate my brain power and business qualifications very nearly as highly as I do. Unfortunately, they do not attribute to them a very high exchangeable cash value.

The important thing, therefore, for me seemed to be to discover a way of making one pair of trousers last 365 days without bagging.

Fortunately, I have a practical knowledge of mechanics, and am of an inventive turn of mind. I have spent the savings of all my past life in patenting car couplers, motors a la Keely, and flying machines which very nearly succeeded in flying. My necessity hatched a new invention.

I went to one of the most skillful and artistic tailors on the Bowery and told him what I wanted, and at the same time warned him that I had a patent on my idea.

My idea was to get some of the cement which enables a broken plate to support a ton of cobble stones and a sheet of the genuine, old fashioned gum—such as the old fashioned gum shoes were made of—and paste back of the knee an oblong piece, wide enough and long enough to cover all that part of the trousers which generally bags. The tailor entered into my idea enthusiastically. He offered to buy the patent outright for twenty dollars, and to give me a royalty of five cents a pair on the first hundred pairs which should be sold. I refused his magnanimous offer, and am "holding for a rise."

He thought that if a little elasticity was a good thing a great deal more would be better. I think he must have pasted inside those trousers the soles of his grandmother's gum shoes.

The first time I went out with those trousers on strangers accosted me, and said they should not have known that I had no legs from my walk if they had not been informed that I was a Grand Army man and had had both legs shot off at the battle of Antietam. The cause of their delusion was that as I lifted each foot from the ground the leg from the knee suddenly snapped forward.

On the way home from business I went into the M. A. C. gymnasium. I had no time to put on my gymnasium tights, and contented myself with taking off coat, vest, collar and cuffs. I started in for a run. My friends and the director thought I showed poor judgment in starting at such a pace. Some of the crack runners were on the track, and at the outset I almost equaled their fastest spurts.

But, great Scott, how they were dumfounded when I spurted! They said I got around the track at such a rate of speed that I was only visible as a continuous curve, diabolic rather than parabolic. I felt that if I ran my fastest again I should need a pedometer with an air brake attachment. The swift way in which my feet glided forward and the extent of their reach were especially admired. A crack oarsman's "recovery," they said, was nothing in comparison.

I jumped the high jump. In fact, if I stooped down suddenly, I felt obliged to jump up straight into the air several feet. I broke the records and left the pieces far behind me in "high" and "broad" jumping. I smashed the lifting machine, and in short did astonishing feats in all that grade of work where the action of the knees comes into play. I was heralded far and wide as a new and marvelous sprinter and jumper.

And, best of all, my trousers now never bag. They keep their virgin form as long as they hold together.—New York Herald.

How He Got Off.

One night Brown came home very late and found his wife evidently prepared to administer a Caudle lecture. Instead of going to bed he took a seat, and resting his elbows on his knees, seemed absorbed in grief, sighing heavily and uttering such exclamations as "Poor Smith, poor fellow!"

Mrs. Brown, moved by curiosity, said sharply, "What's the matter with Smith?"

"Ah," said Brown, "his wife is giving him fits just now."

Mrs Brown let her husband off that time.—Exchange.

Reptiles With 2,000 Teeth.

Many herbivorous reptiles of the mesozoic period had enormously long hind legs, on which they were able to wade far out into the deep water after sea weeds and other food. These creatures were particularly extraordinary in point of their dental equipment, inasmuch as each of them had about 2,000 grinders to chew with, arranged in magazines of 500 each like cartridges.—Interview in Washington Star.

The Points of a Boarhound.

The boarhound is, like many other dogs, of high temper and courage, but quiet when its natural game is out of view. It is obedient enough when properly trained, but has unflinching courage, and when attacked does not know when it is beaten. It is not a dog to keep in town.—English Mechanic.

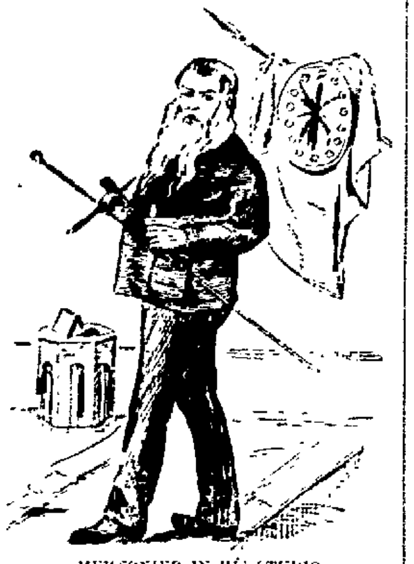
YOUNG FOLKS' COLUMN.

INSTRUCTIVE AND ENTERTAINING READING FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

A Short Chapter About Jean Louis Ernest Meissonier, the Eminent French Painter, Whose Pictures Are the Admiration of the Whole Civilized World.

Meissonier, the eminent French painter, who died in Paris on Jan. 31, was born in 1815, the youngest son of a druggist and grocer at Lyons. The boy seemed to have inherited his mother's talent for drawing, and when his father removed to Paris, to set up a shop, he sent his son to school, and afterward permitted him to study art, first with Potier and then with Leon Cogniet.



MEISSONIER IN HIS STUDIO.

He began by illustrating books. By studying the small pictures of the Dutch school in the Louvre he struck upon the vein of minutest execution which he ever afterward persevered in. His early pictures were regarded as curiosities, and the patience bestowed upon each object, as well as the minuteness of the work, were thought prodigious. However, the first picture he exhibited at the salon in 1834 was sold for a small sum. Though some of his most brilliant achievements were in Louis Philippe's reign he only became famous in 1855, when the late Prince Consort admired "La Rixe" at the Universal exhibition, which Napoleon at once bought for about $5,000 and presented to his guest. Thenceforward, whatever he painted commanded high prices. In 1859 he accompanied the emperor on his Italian campaign, and did a painting of Napoleon III at Solferino, and afterward, under the inspiration of Thiers' "History," began his series illustrating the "Napoleonic Cycle." To this period belong "1805," "1807" and "1814," the last of the three being the finest of all. In 1884, the jubilee year of his career, there were some one hundred and fifty works of his in Paris, representing, however, scarcely a fourth part of those he had then completed and sold.

In his studio Meissonier talked incessantly, passing to and fro among his sketches. He retained the extraordinary strength of his eyesight till the very last. It was his marvelous vision which enabled him to produce, without the help of glasses, effects of lifelike realism in the faces of the size of a thumbnail which occur in most of his pictures. His conscientiousness knew no limits. When he painted his masterpiece, entitled "1814," representing Napoleon returning from Moscow at the head of his staff, he actually had a road made down an incline, waited for the snow to come, and then requisitioned a battery of artillery to make the ruts he set himself to copy.

Hum-um-um.

Said little brown Bee to big brown Bee:
"Oh! hurry here and see, and see
The loveliest rose—the loveliest rose
That in the garden grows, grows, grows.
Hum-um-um—hum-um-um."
Said little brown Bee to big brown Bee.

Said little brown Bee to big brown Bee:
"Much honey must be here, and we Should beg a portion while we may,
For soon more bees will come this way.
Hum-um-um—hum-um-um."
Said little brown Bee to big brown Bee.

Said big brown Bee to little brown Bee:
"The rose is not for me, for me.
Though she is lovelier by far
Than many other flowers are.
Hum-um-um—hum-um-um."
Said big brown Bee to little brown Bee.

Said big brown Bee to little brown Bee:
"No honey cup has she, has she,
But many cups, all brimming over,
Has yonder little purple clover,
And that's the flower for me, for me.
Hum-um-um—hum-um-um."
Said big brown Bee to little brown Bee.

The Cat's Toilet.

As a rule, animals are clean by nature. Brushes and combs most animals carry with them. Cats, large and small, make the most careful toilets of any class of animal, with the exception of some of the opossums. The lions and tigers wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting the dark, India rubber like ball of the fore foot and the inner toe, and passing it over the face and behind the ears. The foot is thus at the same time a face sponge and brush, and the rough tongue combs the rest of the body.

Why?

Why can't boys get to be great men

Why can't I have some reg'lar pants

THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

Queer Superstitions Indulged in by the Players of Cards.

One of the most common superstitions is that where a card player who is not having good luck gets up and solemnly walks around his chair three times in order to propitiate fortune, or the player will call for a new pack of cards. The partners in a game of cards who have the grain of the table running between them are also supposed to be helped thereby. This, according to Notes and Queries, is an Irish superstition. We also learn from the same source that if you are a card player, and not having a table in your room, start to play cards on the bed, then beware, for this is an act sure to bring misfortunes innumerable.

Never throw a pack of cards at any one, as the act will bring all kinds of bad luck to the person struck.

When you have a pack of cards which have seen their best days do not commit the imprudence of giving them away. It is also bad luck. The proper plan is to burn them, and preferably with pepper and salt.

The belief that a large number of people have in the efficacy of fortune telling by cards is too well known to dwell upon. These people, when a fortune teller is not convenient, will often pick out their own fortune by means of divers kinds of solitaire.

Then there is the old proverb, "Lucky at cards, unlucky at love."

In a game of cards it is considered unlucky to a player to rest your foot on the back rung of his chair while looking at the game. Rest your foot on one of the side rungs or on the seat of the chair, but the back rung never.

One of the most curious superstitions I have met with is one which was told me of an old Irishman who could never be persuaded to play cards unless he wore his hat. When pressed for a reason he finally gave this one. The devil is always around when card playing is in progress, and not to wear a hat would be a sign of respect to his majesty, and that would bring bad luck.

Thomas Betterton.

We have only to think of the period covered by Betterton's life to see how important is his place in the annals of acting. Born in 1635, he appeared first on the stage in 1660. A fine opportunity for a young actor to come into notice in the year of the Restoration after the dreary regime (dreary to actors at least) of the commonwealth and the protectorate. The stage had been under the strictest supervision, and was practically suppressed. A few old actors preserved in some sort the tradition of Shakespeare's day, and there was more than one who claimed that he had had instruction in great parts from Shakespeare himself. There were no actresses then. There was Stephen Hammerton, "a most noted and beautiful woman actor," and later we find in Betterton's company one Edward Kynaston, who is described by Pepys as "the loveliest lady that ever I saw in my life."

The Restoration changed all this, for as early as Jan. 3, 1661, Pepys enters in his book, "To the theatre, where was acted 'Beggar's Bush,' it being very well done, and here the first time that ever I saw women come upon the stage." In the course of his long career as an actor—from 1660 to 1710—Betterton was the chosen interpreter of all the heroes of English drama. Besides acting the great parts of Shakespeare, he suffered under Sir William Davenant, and later had the pick of all the Restoration drama. In 1698 Jeremy Collie struck a heavy blow at authors and actors with his "Short View of the Immorality and Profaneness of the English Stage," which was ineffectually answered by Congreve. Dryden, indeed, published an acknowledgment, "dignified and stately," of the justness of Collie's attack, so far as it referred to him. Betterton played at his own benefit in 1709, and died in the following year. He was the great actor of his time, and was fortunate in a wife whose talent was hardly inferior to his own. The history of his stage career, corresponding as it exactly does with the history of the Restoration drama, is of the highest possible interest to the student of the stage.

Vibrato and Tremolo.

Operagoers are constantly using the words vibrato and tremolo, and yet few perhaps could tell wherein these two vocal habits exactly differ. The matter is complicated by the fact that the words do not mean the same thing in instrumental and vocal music. Violinists and violoncellists frequently produce a fine effect by a sort of rapid nervous shaking of the left hand without raising the finger from the string. This is called vibrato, while tremolo is the succession of sounds by rapidly moving the bow up and down on the same note. In vocal music, on the other hand, this apparent rapid iteration of the same note (really due to an alternate weakening and strengthening of the tone) is called vibrato, while the tremolo in vocal music resembles the instrumental vibrato. In vocal music both these habits are objectionable, except in very rare cases.

The Mountain Ash.

The mountain ash or rowan tree is renowned among Celts as well as Teutons for its potency against witches and evil spirits. For this reason it is also called witchen or wiggen tree, the latter name being a corruption of the former; and it is still in request for its prophylactic virtues in the highlands of Scotland, in Ireland, and in Wales, where it is often hung up over doorways and in stables and cow houses to neutralize the wicked spells of witches and warlocks. The mountain ash appears to have been venerated by the Druids, for a stump of the tree, probably a relic of one planted by them, has frequently been found in their old burying places and stone circles.

Balm of Gilead.

The balm of Gilead, which is alluded to in the Old Testament as being extremely precious and which is spoken of by Strabo, Pliny and other ancient writers as being a cure for almost every disease, is a liquid resinous substance of high fragrance and enjoys a very high reputation in the east. It is generally believed to be taken from a species of balsam tree, a small tree growing in Arabia and Abyssinia and known as [illegible]. The finest balsam, known as balm of Mecca, is obtained by incisions; it is at first turbid and white, but finally becomes a golden yellow color of the consistency of honey. Inferior kinds are obtained by boiling the fruit and the twigs.

A Cold Wave Defined.

A cold wave is defined by Professor Russell, of the weather bureau, as a fall of temperature [illegible] of 20 degs. over an area of [illegible] square miles, the temperature [illegible] area descending [illegible] In the decade ending 1880 no less than [illegible] cold waves were recorded in the United States.

A PHILADELPHIA ROMANCE.

In Which the Day Was Named and Then Came the End.

"I swear it!"

These words were spoken in that classic portion of old Philadelphia where the placid waters of the sleepy Schuylkill seem too lazy to turn in their little bed. Not a sound was heard in the early spring night but the rush of innumerable cable cars, the clang of bells, the zephyr like movements of the trains every two minutes on the nearby railroad bridge and the song of the pumped in wind as it forced its way through the narrow lamp pipes. Beyond the shadow of the mountainous coke piles towered a series of strange brick buildings. Ever and anon a tired looking figure might be seen lifting a shovel or agitating a wheelbarrow. Bright snatches of flame sometimes broke into the gathering gloom and lit up the wierd surroundings. Travelers on the highway would stop at these impressive moments and say to each other in awe struck tones:

"Behold where Wagner makes it!"

The youth who had just spoken took off his hat and wiped his pallid brow, when the fair girl standing by his side told him to put it on again. In the far west there shone a silver crescent where the moon was giving a quarter show. Elfrida Shortwate, student as she was of Vassar, and knowing the stars well, from Venus down to Adonis, looking at the bright orb over her left shoulder, could not repress a shudder. Still, though she might shake herself, it was very evident she didn't want to shake him.

"And you'll live with mamma?"

There was something in the maiden's accents that suggested to D. O. Spudkins, experienced as he was, a strong draft on the back of a close shaved neck. It was not incredulity or doubt. The full import of her question suddenly struck him, as it were, with a strong upper cut as he was trying to dodge, and left him helpless unless saved by the call of time.

"And with mamma too. I swear it."

He spoke the words, but there was no gush to them. The elocution was that of a phonograph or an Edison doll. She noticed the strange air of abstraction which had fallen upon him, and while he might not have been her last chance he was for the time being, and she was determined not to lose it.

"Then I am yours, Daniel," she murmured. "When shall it be?"

But to this his lips gave forth no answer. Even beneath the shadow of the gas lamp it could be seen he was white. She peered anxiously into his eyes. He may have been waiting for inspiration or merely a good opportunity for catching a passing car. Yet he said nothing. All the proud feelings of an injured love welled into her woman's bosom. What men in convivial moments often noticed in him she noticed now. He kept on saying nothing. There was a dreadful pause, broken only by the crash of innumerable air castles and the miscellaneous noises first mentioned. Then shifting her gum to the other side she threw the finest article of withering scorn she possessed into the inquiry:

"And when will it be? When the new Mint is built?"

"No!" he hissed through his clenched teeth; "when the public buildings are finished."

And, jumping a six weeks' board bill, he escaped to the wilds of Laniganville.—Philadelphia Times.

Thrilling.

The editor of a daily paper says: "We took a new reporter on trial yesterday. He went out to hunt for items, and after being away all day returned with the following, which he said was the best he could do:

"'Yesterday we saw a sight which froze our blood with horror. A cabman, driving down Clark street at a rapid pace, was very near running over a nurse and two children. There would have been one of the most heartrending catastrophes ever recorded had not the nurse, with wonderful forethought, left the children at home before she went out, and providentially stepped into a chemist's shop just before the cab passed. Then, too, the cabman, just before reaching the crossing, thought of something he had forgotten, and, turning about, drove in the opposite direction. Had it not been for this wonderful concurrence of favoring circumstances a doting father, a loving mother, and affectionate brothers and sisters would have been plunged into deepest woe and most unutterable funeral expenses.'

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

STILL A MYSTERY

Miss Ackerman Leaves a Letter, but Assigns No Motive for Suiciding—She Lives Over Nine Hours After the Fatal Shot.

Miss Lizzie Ackerman, the girl who shot herself through the brain Monday morning at 9:30, died at 7:10 in the evening, without apparent suffering. From the moment the shot was fired she was unconscious. She had calculated well, not having it fall upon herself to make an explanation of the deed.

It was discovered Monday afternoon Miss Ackerman had obtained the revolver by forcing open the drawer in which it was kept. A letter was also found which settled beyond a doubt the fact of suicide. It was found in a drawer in which she kept her jewelry, trinkets, etc. It still leaves the motive of self-destruction as much in doubt as ever, and nothing is left but surmises, which it would not be proper to make. The letter shows a carefully planned and premeditated effort on the part of the young lady to take her life, and all this right in the midst of her jollity and cheerfulness up to within a few hours of the firing of the fatal shot, seems most astonishing in one of her years.

The letter was enclosed in a mourning envelope, carefully sealed and addressed, "Mr. and Mrs. H. Ackerman, City," and contained the following last sad message, dated April 6, '91, the morning of the suicide:

"DEAR PARENTS:—I love you dearly and it is hard to part with you, but I must. I think you will know the reason why. Forgive me, but I must do it. Please have a quiet funeral: let Bernhardt preach over my corpse: let it be private; let no one see me. Bury me tomorrow, please, and again forgive me. I love life, but I am doing this for the best. If you receive any letters burn them unread. You have done very much for me and I thank you. Please grant my last wish, which I have asked you. Good-bye to you all. Forgive me, in Heaven I may find forgiveness, if not on earth. I love you all and all my friends. I hate to leave, but it must be so. Good-bye. From "LIZZIE.

"Forget and forgive that there ever lived a Lizzie Ackerman. Excuse my writing."

The funeral services will occur tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the house, to be conducted by Rev. Charles Bernhardt, of the German Evangelical Protestant church, of which deceased was a member.

ON TO TAMPA.

REFERENCES TO SANFORD, WINTER PARK AND ORLANDO

Col. Christian Strikes His Old Time Eloquence in Writing of the Glories of Tampa and Its Famous Sights—Reference to the Marionites Seen on the Gulf Coast.

TAMPA, Fla., March 23.—For the first time we have visited the Gulf coast. Florida has a Marion colony on the west side of things as well as the east, and toward them we turned our steps.

At Tampa we find Mrs. Cuscaden, W. H. Cooper and three sons—now fine young men—Ed being a benedict, Jud Reynolds—married and settled down, young Eber Priest—the "most domestic man in South Florida," so young Eber says, and Mrs. Ida Branch, nee Seffner. At Seffner, John Franz and family, although Miss Kitty and Girard are at Winter Park, at school, and Fred P. Seffner and wife. At Lake Thonotosassa, Gen. W. P. Hazen and family and sons and families, Dr. and Mrs. Dorchester, Dr. Snavely and family and Mr. and Mrs. Endicott. We found all well and in general as happy and prosperous as we could expect.

Some little homesickness; but who would not be, being Buckeye born and Buckeye bred? For throbbing through the hearts of men or women Ohio born, in all lands where e'er they be, no matter what their lot, there is a strain of memory music striking the tendrils like the chords of a silver stringed harp that keeps repeating: "Here's a cheer for Ohio, the grand old Buckeye state."

* * *

From Titusville, on the Indian river, to Tampa, on the gulf, is an hundred miles, but by missing connections you can make it seem a thousand. We were laid out by the steamer being aground, at the old home of Gen. Titus, and passed the night in a cottage on a cot, so called, with doors and windows shut down close, there being no screens to prevent a free fight between the red bug, the sand fly and the genial murmuring mosquito, whom we feared might come in to knock out the bed bug that "gets there all the same."

* * *

From Sanford to Tampa is South Florida, and all along the South Florida railway we pass through an endless stream of full bearing orange groves, until the eye surfeits with the feast of foliage and bloom and golden fruit, and one wonders where are the people to consume all the fruit? Once you eat your round dozen a day, a mental calculation ensues and your wonder ceases. We stop off at Winter Park with Mrs. Dr. Fisher, who will visit friends here, and also Rev. Julian at Leesberg, near by. The latter is nicely and happily situated with recovered health, as his many Marion friends will be pleased to know. Winter Park is an ideal winter home town, platted and laid out by Chicago and eastern people. Winter Park has no Board of Trade howling for manufacturers. No dram shops, no smoking chimneys, no hum and bustle of trade. Its deeds of lots carefully prevent all such active agencies, and flower covered spaces, handsome groves, fine walks and drives, good schools and seminaries, churches etc. make up Winter Park life. The Seminole Hotel, one of those palaces owned by the Plant Investment company, is located here. From its tall tower you can see with the naked eye thirteen lakes about and near the village. On the water fronts are villas boats dart about upon the limpid water and cottages; launches, yachts and rowers and across the expanse comes strains of music, the hotel band being out on a "toot." All this you can get at Winter Park for four dollars per day and upwards. However, it is an elegant home town, with fine schools for children of both sexes, and under church auspices.

* * *

Lower down toward Tampa is Orlando, by many considered the liveliest and most pleasing town for a home in South Florida. The orange groves are fine and numerous. A large business in trade of all kinds is carried on and the city is provided with all the latest improvements, water, electric light, street railways and debt. When one notices the boom on at Orlando, this big sand pile denominated Florida assumes a figure of value, and something aside from climate appears.

* * *

Still lower down is Kissimmee, (accent on the second syllable). This is in some sense the port of entry to the "Disston lands." To understand the nature of the Disston improvement and drainage recovery lands of South Florida one must know and realize that land in Florida, with a soil as we have it at home, is very rare. Sand of various degrees of fertility is the prevalent land of the state. Our bottom lands of Nile like elements are not known in a state of nature, with the few exceptional spots known as hammocks. Large areas of southern Florida under the water level of the fresh water lakes and their marginal expanses of bordering wet swamp and prairies, are of extreme richness, being to great depths composed of the richest of vegetable and other deposits. These lands might be likened to those of the Scioto marsh lands now being reclaimed in Hardin county.

Henry Disston, of Philadelphia, the saw man so well known by reputation to our local woodsmen and mechanics, bought of the state millions of acres of these swamps. His engineers went over the ground and by means of drainage canals, lowered the water levels in some instances fifteen feet. This reclaimed great areas, with soil fabulous in fertility. Think of it! All these acres in a region practically frostless, capable of raising sugarcane, rice and all semi-tropical products, and in addition all the vegetables and berries of the North in mid winter.

Amid these lands, under such conditions, sugar and rice mills are operating and vast phenomenal wealth is being created from the magic of this soil under these trophical skies and influences. Towns grow where the 'gator hissed and the environment of luxury where the moccassin wriggled his slimy folds through the lilly pads. You can find in these markets strawberries in February, with beans, cabbage, tomatoes, etc., thrown in. Some of these lands produce more in money value to an acre than an 80-acre farm in Marion county, but it takes grit, sense, experience and some money to do it, aside from good bone labor.

* * *

At Sanford we strike a town that is going forward with city airs, with the river St. Johns, Lake Monroe and three railways to boom it. It has grown like magic to my eye, looking back over fourteen years at its site, then a hotel and a wilderness. We here saw the first, last and only fat hog of Florida. It had the wide, wide world for its pen, and the city of Sanford for its feeding ground. It was fat and familiar, weighed two hundred and fifty and had a sore foot, so it went limping and grunting along the pathway of life with none to make it afraid, saw a few small coons, and they ran. You can tell when to kill a razor back hog of the piney woods range of Florida very easily. Nothing simpler. Hold him up by the middle, if his tail end goes down, he is fat to kill; if up, let him go. If you wish to you can have a "dang good time" chasing razor back boars in Florida, providing always, the razor back don't chase you. In the latter event the boar has the "dang good time."

* * *

Tampa on the west coast was first visited many years ago from Marion, by Henry N. Love who passed a year there. Then, as but a few years since, it was a straggling, unkempt seaport town village on the hot sand; a rendezvous for the cattlemen and cowboys of the interior ranges; the gulf port from which the steers were shipped to Havana to feed the Spanish army in Cuba. Those were halcyon days for the little town of several hundred people. Spanish doubloons were thicker than fleas on a Florida darky's dog, and a cow owner could go around fuller than a goat and slam down his saddle bags with sixteen hundred good gold coins in them anywhere on the floor and find all intact when he sobered up. "But," said one of the old ones, "we can't do it now, the yankees and the preachers are here," and his eyes twinkled. In those good old days the Seminoles also had "niggers and cows and things" and sometimes Providence sent a wreck inshore to the good of the coast and everybody had a high old time from the usufruct. One time a lot of red paint was thus providentially ordered and a gang of the followers of Oceola, living up about Thonotosassa, took the hint and painted the land of flowers red. They daubed everything daubable, including their pine log cabins and history made them "the red house tribe." Those were bully old days. A few years since Mr. Plant took a hand. He built the South Florida railroad into Tampa.

Tampa bay is an indentation of the gulf, twelve miles wide and thirty miles long, forming one of the most perfect of harbors. At the base a peninsula juts out some ten or twelve miles, dividing the bay into smaller shallow harbors, known as Hillsborough Bay and Old Tampa Bay. Tampa is situated on the former at the mouth of Hillsborough River. Only boats of small draft could reach the old town but as a few coastwise schooners could easily carry on the trade, including the Cuba cattle business, no one found fault with the mud bank until Mr. Plant, with his South Florida railway arrived. He wanted deep water. So he crossed the river and ran down the peninsula mentioned some ten miles or more, ran out a dock on piles a mile to deep water; covered the docks with his tracks: built a fine hotel thereon. The Inn, and Port Tampa came into being. He sent steamers to Havana tri-weekly, then others to Jamaica, Mobile, New Orleans, etc., and still others to be started. Swift steamers and through trains made up the tourist, mail and trade route, New York to Havana. Tampa began to wriggle from its lethargy. Then Mr. Plant looked over the river and there was mud and slime and grass and water snakes along the front, and back of it saw palmetto and pine trees and sand. He scratched the lantern of Aladdin and the genii came, and up sprang a Moorish palace thirteen hundred feet front, of brick and stone and iron and glass. The minarets and domes glisten under the sun of today as of silver. Twenty-eight hundred electric lights make the night disappear and the day stand still. The looms of France, of Persia and the best of our own have covered its floors with velvet softness. All that art and mechanic device can do is here done to create Paradise. The wood finish is mahogany, while marble, onyx and kindred materials are everywhere in mantel, column or detail, as required in the harmony of the whole. The furnishings of bric-a-brac, pictures and sculpture were selected by Mrs. Plant and evidence her cultivated taste and versatile talents in crowning this masterpiece of architecture with the charming and luxurious details of fairy land. Where the frogs croaked a Venetian water front appeared and the saw palmettos have given away to the graceful forms of tropical foliage and the blooming plants of the floriculturist's art. Gaily decorated little crafts of all pleasure kind skim the waters, and from the music room at evening and other hours come strains of delicious music of the finest of orchestra and military bands.

The scene at night is brilliant to an extreme degree banks of flowers grace every nook and corner. The great names of finance, politics, war and literature of our own and other lands, are here in the flesh. Proctor, Schofield, Vilas, Porter, Admiral Walker, members of parliament, of congress. Senators of the past and the present have mingled with the throngs come here to view Mr. Plant's last effort for the pleasure of travelers and the profit of his companies. Beautiful women in the rich costumes the American barons of wealth afford: stately men: Spanish dons and Cuban senoritas, dashing middies and gay officers from the fleet lying below make effective groupings in the rich colored settings of the great drawing rooms, the office, and the halls of such length that they assume the form of vistas. And yonder in the music hall, sitting quietly by himself, a pleasant faced, clear complexioned, white mustached man of past middle life, that is the Alladin of this wonderland, Mr. Plant himself, and all this is the Tampa Bay Hotel. A switch from the railway brings the passenger trains direct to the door of this edifice. When Tampa saw all this the old town gave another heave. During this muss along comes Mr. Ybor, a Cuban or Spanish gentlemen of a cigar manufacturing firm. He purchased a large tract of land in the suburbs; secured the franchise for a street railway to be run with steam motors, laid out the town of Ybor City, erected factories for the manufacture of clear Havana cigars. Others followed; fifteen hundred cigar-makers were employed and at once a magic city sprang into being, and began to close in on Tampa. See the situation. Remember the port, then the new hotel, Tampa city, Ybor city, all practicaly one. Town lots to be laid out from Ybor city to Port Tampa a distance of twelve miles. Imagine the distance. Tampa awoke and we found it in the throes of a boom. The usual tearing down the old shacks, and the rebuilding forces are on hand, real estate agents are in force, capitalists are investing and corner lots have doubled five times in value. The old village has gone to the bow-wows, and a new spic span town with its limits spreading from Ybor to the Port, embracing fifty-thousand people it its near destiny. G. B. C.

—FOR—

Wednesday, April 8

All the linings, buttons and thread will be given with every Silk Dress sold. This is done by request of a number of ladies who could not attend our special Silk Sale of a short time ago. Our motive in giving the linings is to draw attention to our Silks and show their superiority over the old-styled goods (with a new name) that are being advertised. This is just for Wednesday and if you do not take advantage of it you will miss the chance of a lifetime. Remember, ours are the new weaves, will not cut and require NO SIX MONTHS' guarantee. If you lack some of the money pay what you have on it and we will lay it away for you.

DUDLEY A WINNER.

HIS ELECTION THE ONLY EXCEPTION TO DEMOCRATIC VICTORY

Isleib the Only Councilman With a Suspicion of Republicanism. Scratching was the Order of the Day, and It was Quite General. Some Close Riding in the Fourth Ward.

The weather Monday did not discourage considerable hustling at the polls by both political parties. It was a day of unusual scratching, and but few of the candidates escaped, even the Prohibitionists indulging slightly. Dudley won the victory over Gailey by 145 votes, otherwise the Democrats scored a victory, but were hustled in certain quarters. Isleib's election to the council from the Third is not hailed with any especial enthusiasm, and he is not counted on the Republican side.

The result of the day's balloting is given below in figures received in advance of the official canvass, but they can be relied upon as nearly correct.

Little Nugget Co.

A good and highly appreciative audience will no doubt greet Little Nugget Co. at Music Hall, and nothing pleases more than to chronicle the fact of this company's superb and enjoyable acting in a very laughable and entertaining comedy. The press of other cities are unanimous in their praise of this company. The play and players are said to be both funny, very, very funny. The music, both vocal and instrumental excellant and dancing splendid. The comedians Herbert and Joe Cawthorn are great and are said to keep their audience in a continual laughter or screams, more properly speaking. The engagement is for one night only and we suggest to secure seats in advance.

At Their Own Home.

Charles Rieger, an employe of Mr. Huber, and Miss Lena Pfeifer were married last Saturday evening in a rare but very admirable way, having the ceremony performed at their own home. A new home had been nicely furnished on east George street and thither the happy contracting parties invited a company of their friends to witness their marriage.

Rev. Bernhardi performed the ceremony in the presence of a merry assembly, and a fine supper followed. Mr. and Mrs. Rieger have a host of well wishers for their happiness in their new relation.

George Uish, a resident of West Marion and an employe of the Wyman Manufacturing Co's works, lost a finger Monday while at work. He was working at a joiner when the middle finger of his left hand was caught in the machine and ground off. Dr. Crane found it necessary to amputate the member near the second joint. It was Uish's first experience, not having worked at the machine over five minutes.

At the annual parish meeting of St. Paul's Episcopal church, held Monday night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. R. Harshberger, S. W.; Dr. Denman, T. W.; Vestrymen, Dr. Rattensperger, Geo. Smith, H. D. Peck, I. I. Clark, John Cunningham, J. S. Beale, F. G. Richardson, Mr. Porter.

All the assessors this year are required to make enumeration of all male inhabitants over twenty-one years of age, in accordance with a law passed in 1885 requiring it to be done every fourth year. The auditor will supply the necessary blanks. The returns must be made to the clerk of court.
